

Rick Hill

Rick was born in Hutchinson, KS, the year is left undisclosed. As the youngest of 14 children he learned to observe and listen. And listen he did. There was always music in the house; singing, guitars, pianos, drums, trumpets, bongo's; and probably even a washboard.

Rick draws his influences from associates and musical legends such as Taj Mahal, Mississippi John Hurt, Leadbelly, Ramblin' Jack Elliot, and Roger McGuinn. You'll find that Rick's music has a very distinctive tinge of rural and southern blue's and folk.

A small mid-western town could not hold this blooming talent. The bright lights and expectations of a musical career led Rick to L.A. and Hollywood.

While in California Rick worked extensively in the studios doing session work, which eventually led to a recording contract and touring with such people as Stephen Stills, POCO, the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, and Buddy Miles.
